Gmail Calendar Documents Reader Web more ▼   Help | Sign in

Google groups

Google Desktop Help (Enterprise Edition)

[   ] [Search this category] [Search Groups]

Discussions > Something's Broken > Disappearing quick launch taskbar, after google desktop install (win xp sp3)

About this group
Join this group

Options

 Sponsored links

Windows 7 Defrag Program
Get a free trial of the industry's only Windows 7 certified defragger.
PerfectDisk.com

☆ 2 messages - Collapse all

Brice3010 View profile   More options Oct 22 2008, 3:48 pm

I installed a brand new win xp professional sp3 OS on a pc, no issues, all software performs perfectly. Then I proceed to install Google desktop, and the first thing that happens after the first reboot is the disappearance of my quick launch taskbar.
No matter what I do (registry settings and so on, as per google search on this issue), every time after reboot, the quick launch taskbar is not there anymore. I can set it back, and everytime after relog or reboot it is gone.

When I uninstall Google desktop the problem is gone.
Of course I would like to keep Google desktop, but no way I want a disappearing quick launch taskbar. Any suggestions?

Раскрутка сайта в Гугле?
Сделайте Раскрутку сайта в Гугле своими руками! DVD-курс...
Strateg.ClubProfi.com

Upgrade your SafeBrowsing
Better Security with 15x More Sites
Learn about what you're missing...
bcws.brightcloud.com

Forward

Brice3010 View profile   More options Oct 23 2008, 12:48 pm

Disabling Google Desktop taskbar solves the issue.

On 22 okt, 15:48, Brice3010 wrote:

- Show quoted text -

Forward

End of messages

« Back to Discussions   « Newer topic   Older topic »